Diversification Benefits of Bank Loans

An allocation to bank loans through Hartford Floating Rate Fund may help investors improve the asset mix within their fixed-income portfolios.

A Hedge Against Rising Rates

The prices of traditional bonds generally drop as interest rates rise. When new bonds are issued at higher rates, existing bonds with lower rates become less attractive to investors, causing a drop in value.

The Fund invests in bank loans with yields that adjust their interest rates every 30, 60, or 90 days, so they may be less affected by rising interest rates.

Diversification and Attractive Yield

Hartford Floating Rate Fund may offer a higher yield than many traditional fixed-income asset classes. It also has a lower correlation when compared to traditional bonds.

7.38% 30-Day SEC Yield
as of 12/31/23

Experienced Management

Bank loans are a smaller asset class than many other types of bonds, which makes them difficult for individual investors to access. The Fund's management team averages more than 25 years of investment experience and is backed by the full resources of sub-adviser Wellington Management.

Important Risks: Investing involves risk, including the possible loss of principal. Security prices fluctuate in value depending on general market and economic conditions and the prospects of individual companies. • Loans can be difficult to value and less liquid than other types of debt instruments; they are also subject to nonpayment, collateral, bankruptcy, default, extension, prepayment and insolvency risks. • Fixed income security risks include credit, liquidity, call, duration, event and interest-rate risk. As interest rates rise, bond prices generally fall. • Investments in high-yield ("junk") bonds involve greater risk of price volatility, illiquidity, and default than higher-rated debt securities. • Derivatives are generally more volatile and sensitive to changes in market or economic conditions than other securities; their risks include currency, leverage, liquidity, index, pricing, regulatory and counterparty risk. • Foreign investments may be more volatile and less liquid than U.S. investments and are subject to the risk of currency fluctuations and adverse political, economic and regulatory developments. • The Fund's investments may fluctuate in value over a short period of time. • Changes related to LIBOR could have an adverse impact on financial instruments that reference this rate. • Integration of environmental, social, and/or governance (ESG) characteristics into the investment process may not work as intended.
