* For daily accruing funds, this estimated ordinary income distribution is in addition to the regular monthly net investment income distribution. This is also known as a special or additional distribution. Please visit the Tax Center at hartfordfunds.com for more information.

Funds not listed did not pay a monthly, quarterly or annual ordinary distribution in December.

Frequently Asked Questions

Each year under federal law, mutual funds are required to distribute ordinary income to their shareholders. This ordinary income distribution is the results of dividend and interest earned, realized and unrealized activity on derivative transactions. Below is a FAQ that provides additional information regarding Ordinary Income.

How are the amounts of ordinary income determined?

Distributions are generally based on dividend and interest earned, realized and unrealized activity on derivate transactions.

When an ordinary income is distributed, do shareholders lose money?

No. On the date of the distribution, the net asset value of the fund will drop by the amount paid to shareholders. This is why a fund's price per share generally decreases when distributions are made. For example, consider a fund with a $10 net asset value that will distribute ordinary income of $2 per share. On the date of the distribution, the net asset value of the fund will drop to $8 per share and the $2 distribution will be paid out to the shareholder.

A shareholder may choose to receive their distribution in cash, in which case the shareholder's account value will be reduced by the amount they take as a distribution. The shareholder may also choose to reinvest the distribution, which will result in the purchase of additional shares.
