

Nanette Abuhoff Jacobson

Managing Director and Multi-Asset Strategist for Wellington Management Company LLP
Global Investment Strategist for Hartford Funds

With more than 25 years of experience in the capital markets, Nanette Abuhoff Jacobson is an investor and has held a variety of roles spanning the major asset classes. As Hartford Funds' global investment strategist, she analyzes and interprets markets and investment opportunities for the mutual funds that are sub-advised by Wellington Management Company LLP, and shares those views with Hartford Funds' sales organization, the financial-professional community, and major broker-dealers and distributors. Her monthly insights publication has over 10,000 subscribers. In her role at Wellington Management, she also advises the firm's institutional clients, including pension funds, insurance companies, endowments and foundations, and central banks, consulting on active and strategic asset-allocation issues to develop multi-asset investment solutions.

Ms. Abuhoff Jacobson is part of the investment team for Wellington Management's multi-asset investments as well as to Hartford's model portfolios. Her thought leadership includes co-authoring the firm's Multi-Asset Outlook (distributed to approximately 8,000 clients as well as on the firm's blog and social media/content platform) and publishing white papers on various asset allocation issues. Ms. Abuhoff Jacobson led Wellington's Future Themes initiative by pioneering research on the secular change in fixed-income liquidity after the financial crisis in 2008 and the emerging-market-like issues facing developed markets in the coming years. She is a featured speaker on Hartford Funds' quarterly investment outlook webinar, which attracts thousands of financial professionals annually. She is an experienced main stage speaker for both institutional and retail clients. She has also developed a public profile via TV appearances, print interviews and social media, including Bloomberg, Nasdaq, MarketWatch, WSJ, Reuters and others.

Prior to her current role, Nanette was Wellington Management's director of fixed-income product management, responsible for ensuring the integrity of the firm's fixed-income approaches and driving business strategy, product development, and client retention. She played a key leadership role in strengthening the firm's position as a fixed-income thought leader globally. Nanette joined Wellington Management in 2005 as an investment director for US fixed-income products.

Previously, Nanette was a managing director at JP Morgan's investment banking unit. She was a client relationship manager for pension funds in North America (2003, 2005) and was the senior US fixed-income strategist (1989–2003). She also worked in the Financial Strategies Group at Security Pacific National Bank, where she developed software to value complex financial instruments (1986–1989), after working as a programmer for Interactive Data Corporation and IBM (1983–1986).

Nanette received her BA in computer science from Barnard College, Columbia University (1983).
