

The Cyclical Nature of Growth vs. Value Investing

Each style has had its ups and downs over the years. Could the cycle be turning once again?

History shows that the performance of growth stocks and value stocks has been cyclical. Growth stocks outperformed in the '90s during the dotcom era and have performed extremely well over the past decade. Value stocks outperformed after 2001 as investors placed a greater value on dividends and stock valuations. This cyclical behavior highlights the benefits of having both types of investments in a portfolio.

Russell 1000 Index: Growth vs. Value

Five-Year Monthly Rolling Returns (1983-3/21)

Past performance does not guarantee future results. The chart shows the values of the Russell 1000 Growth Index returns minus the Russell 1000 Value Index returns. When the line is above 0, growth stocks outperformed value stocks. When the line is below 0, value stocks outperformed growth stocks. The performance shown above is index performance and is not representative of any Hartford Fund's performance. Indices are unmanaged and not available for direct investment.
